✓ (what per-video patterns really rest on): Shorts ≈ 33, Long ≈ 50. Treat per-video findings with that in mind, not the raw video count.

✓ Title script split — Title scripts present in Shorts: Latin. (Detects SCRIPT only — Latin lumps English/Spanish/Portuguese/Polish together, so this is not a region or language read.)

Rocket League YouTube Strategy Analysis

Strategy brief

Winning Shorts in Rocket League are short (28s vs 48s for slower videos), avoid question-mark framing, and open with ranking/comparison language ('top', 'tas', 'ranking'). Long-form shows no clear title/format advantage, meaning the niche may be driven more by channel authority and gameplay novelty than structural hooks. Make short, ranked/comparison content and post on Sundays; expect heavy right-skew (a few videos will go viral, most won't).

Per-signal read

Signal	Read	Status
Velocity outliers	Fresh Shorts average 33.7K views/day; 52 fast, 49 slow — decent spread. Long-form averages 1.8K/day with 67 fast, 38 slow — skewed toward faster videos.	Real signal (working as intended; meets min sample).
Title length	64.5 vs 61.5 chars — difference of 3 chars, both ~60–65 range. No clear separator.	Noise (within margin of variation; min sample met but no direction).
Emoji impact	65% fast vs 52% slow — 13-point gap. Stays below minimum threshold for claiming a signal; data shows near-threshold noise.	Noise (meets min sample but gap is at threshold; likely to flip on re-run).
Question titles	11% fast vs 31% slow — clear direction, min sample met. Fastest videos avoid questions.	Real signal (strong, actionable direction).
Number/$ in title	25% vs 21% — 4-point gap, no direction.	Noise.
ALL-CAPS words	0.0 vs 0.5 (fastest vs slowest). Weak signal in Shorts; long-form actually uses caps in fast videos. Contradicts itself across formats.	Noise (weak magnitude; contradicted by long-form; don't act on it).
Title hook	Top Shorts open with 'tas', 'top', 'ranking' — qualitative, no comparison group.	Weak signal (qualitative only; no slowest-video hook data to compare).
Duration	28s vs 48.5s — clear win for shorter Shorts. Aligns with platform norms.	Real signal (strong, actionable).
Upload timing	Sunday posting appears most common in fastest Shorts — no slowest-day comparison.	Weak signal (qualitative; no control group data provided).
Like rate	1.6% vs 2.9% — tool explicitly flags this as reach artifact, not craft.	Diagnostic only (not actionable).
Comment rate	0.018% vs 0.040% — tool flags as reach artifact.	Diagnostic only (not actionable).
Small-channel breakouts	One Short hit 1570.77x its channel's subscriber count.	Noise (anecdotal; no pattern; single outlier).
Niche saturation	171 channels, top 5 = 17%, effective independent sample ≈33 Shorts / ≈50 long-form.	Real diagnostic (confirms sample clustering; weight findings accordingly).
Title script	Latin only (English/Spanish/Portuguese/Polish lumped). No variation.	Data void (no comparison; expected given US-centric niche).

Signal	Read	Status
Niche freshness	Shorts median 22d, long-form 35d — warm, not spiking.	Real diagnostic (niche is active, not trending).
Per-channel over/under	175/245 Shorts beat their own channel median.	Real diagnostic (most creators do better in this niche than their baseline).
Upload cadence vs reach	amustycow: 50/mo uploads, 29M views/mo (12 of 493 videos).	Noise (top-reach = top-volume contributor; doesn't prove cadence → reach).
Channels in niche (median)	Senju: median 3.2M views/Short across 7 videos.	Real diagnostic (shows outlier channel; not generalizable).
Distribution charts	Shorts: 37s median, right-skewed views (viral outliers dominate). Long-form: 934s median, also right-skewed. Like% drops with views (reach artifact, not quality).	Real diagnostic (confirms short-form wins; shows luck/virality > craft).

Worth following, or noise?

Sample reliability: WEAK → MODERATE (conditional).

- Shorts findings rest on ~33 independent videos (not 245 raw). This is low for statistical confidence but just above the tool's 30-video minimum for most signals. If you see a difference that aligns with platform norms (e.g. shorter videos, no questions), treat it as directional, not iron law. Single re-run could shift 11% vs 31% question-rate by ±5–8%.
- Long-form findings rest on ~50 independent videos and show weak differentiation overall (most signals are "no clear difference"). This is underpowered for detecting title/format effects; take those nulls as "probably not a lever" rather than "proven doesn't matter."
- To trust per-video title/format findings more robustly: you'd need ~100–150 truly independent videos per format (i.e., spread across 40+ channels, not clustered in top 5). Current dataset doesn't meet that.
- Upload timing, title hooks (opening words), and small-channel breakouts are purely qualitative or single-case examples. They're suggestive but not testable patterns yet.

Bottom line: Act on question titles (clear, big gap, meets min sample) and duration (same). Treat emoji, title length, numbers, caps as "no signal yet." Don't bet strategy on Sunday posting or opening words until a second run confirms them.

Tool audit (is each tool working & relevant?)

Tool	Working as intended?	Relevant?	Status
Velocity outliers	✔ Yes — age-adjusted ranking is sound; avoids raw-views bias.	✔ Yes — core metric for "what wins."	KEEP
Title length	✔ Yes — simple binary comparison of fastest vs slowest.	✔ Yes — relevant to Shorts.	KEEP (but sample is borderline; expect noise).

Tool	Working as intended?	Relevant?	Status
Emoji impact	✔ Yes — binary presence check.	✔ Yes — TikTok/YouTube Shorts trope.	KEEP (gap near threshold; monitor next run).
Question titles	✔ Yes — counts '%' with '?' in title.	✔ Yes — known hook pattern; result aligns with niche data.	KEEP
Number/$ in title	✔ Yes — binary check.	⚠ Marginal — in Rocket League (gameplay niche), rank/currency is common but maybe not a title hook (more of a video topic).	KEEP but deprioritise.
ALL-CAPS words	✔ Yes — counts caps sequences.	⚠ Marginal — contradicted by long-form (caps show up in fast videos there). Signal is too weak and format-inconsistent.	DEPRIORITISE; either split

1. "Something's Wrong With This SSL Player 🤖 "
- Hook: Cut to a top-ranked player doing something visibly broken or backwards (playing in reverse, ball physics glitch, or absurd own-goal).

◦ Format: Short (10–15s)

◦ Assessment: Direct copy of the "Something is Not Right" formula (1.4M views) swapped with an SSL angle; low originality, proven mechanic.
2. "Nene Just Made Them Look Silly"
- Hook: Pro play clip where one player's touch creates a nutmeg/humiliation moment; cut to reaction or scoreboard swing.

◦ Format: Short (18–26s)

◦ Assessment: Mirrors the 9.9M "Nene made them dirty" hit; same structure, same pro-moment ragebait; directly derivative but highest-performing template in your data.
3. "Top 5 Rage Moments This Season"
- Hook: Fast cuts of toxic chat, controller throws, or tilted callouts from ranked games, no setup.

◦ Format: Short (22–30s)

◦ Assessment: Lean into the "ragebait" tag that appears on three 1.5M+ shorts; slight variation on "Top 5 Best Moments" (1.7M) but emotion-flipped; proven category, minor twist.
4. "My Teammate Turned Into a Bot (Unranked to SSL)"
- Hook: Duo queue where your teammate plays so bad early it looks automated, then reveal they're actually SSL smurfing.

◦ Format: Long-form (8–12 min)

◦ Assessment: Borrows the "viewer/teammate insanity" hook from "My Viewers Are ACTUALLY INSANE" (81K) and the smurf-reveal tension from "This SSL Top 100 Player Gets TOXIC"; mashup of two mid-performing long formats, not proven in shorts.
5. "Why Does His Car Physics Look Like That 🚗 "
- Hook: Clip of a visual bug, config glitch, or unorthodox camera angle that makes gameplay look wrong; 2–3 second reveal.

◦ Format: Short (11–16s)

◦ Assessment: Repackages the "something off" curiosity (1.4M "Something is Not Right") with a question-adjacent title without the "?" (avoids the -20 percentile question-title pattern); fresh enough framing of the same viral seed.
